BOARD CERTIFIED ORTHOPEDIC SURGEON

Seeing an orthopedic surgeon after a work-related injury can offer several benefits for both the employee and the employer, potentially leading to a quicker and smoother return to work:

- Accurate diagnosis and treatment: Orthopedic surgeons specialize in diagnosing and treating musculoskeletal conditions, providing a more accurate and in-depth assessment compared to general practitioners. This ensures the employee receives the most appropriate treatment plan for their specific injury, potentially leading to faster healing and reduced risk of complications.
- Faster return to work: With accurate diagnosis and effective treatment, employees are more likely to experience a quicker and more complete recovery, allowing them to return to work sooner. This minimizes lost wages and reduces the impact on their personal life.
- Reduced costs: A quicker return to work translates to shorter periods of absence and reduced workers' compensation costs. Additionally, effective treatment can prevent further complications and the need for more expensive interventions down the line.
- Improved productivity: Having employees back at work sooner translates to improved productivity and reduced disruption to operations.
- Reduced administrative burden: Timely diagnosis and treatment plans help streamline the workers' compensation process, minimizing administrative work for the employer.
